“There’s an old saying: ‘that which doesn’t kill you makes you stronger.’ I don’t believe that. I think the things that try to kill you make you angry and sad. Strength comes from the good things - your family, your friends, the satisfaction of hard work. Those are the things that keep you whole. Those are the things to hold on to when you’re broken.”

"A cheater and a bitch. They are perfect for each other." Ashley scoffed in her heart, a faint smile climbing up the corners of her lips. Her smile was so dazzling that no one could look away from her. With one swift swig, she emptied the glass of wine down her throat. Never had she imagined that this glass of wine, drugged by her own mother, would bring her to an unbelievably wealthy and hand... So sad that you don't have an account. My ex wife remarried me chapter 206 Born a long time ago in a land far, far away, Ashley has immersed herself in SF and has read, or watched SF for most of her life. She knows SF when she sees it, but can't explain what SF is. Having taken the blue pill, she lives, eats and breathes SF. In the real world, I am a cognitive behavioural therapist with a background in mental health nursing. My working career has ranged far and wide from civil servant to sales assistant. I've also written for Battlegames and Miniature Wargames magazines, and I was both a reviewer and columnist for Games Master International. In addition, I was a freelancer for FASA Corps working on the 3055 Technical Read Out, and I wrote the OHMU War Machine wargame rules. I've been told I have more interests than most people have dinners, which include: cycling, aikido, iaido, photography, miniatures wargaming, painting, and archery. I am unashamedly a starry eyed dreamer. Sorry, but the page you were trying to view does not exist.
